

PhD-application guideline: Letter of motivation

Intro

State that you (name, university, country) are applying for a PhD scholarship at the Department of Micro- and Nanotechnology. Mention which of the available scholarships you are applying for, and if more than one, present a prioritized list.

Motivation

Write what has motivated you to apply for the scholarship (why are you interested in the project?). Relate this to your specific skills (what will you be bringing to the project?) and to your current and future research interests (what do you expect to get out of the project?).

Other comments

Feel free to write other comments that you find are relevant for your application.

Length

The length of a letter of motivation is typically one page and no more than two pages.